

N-Motion has corrected 2 serious issues with our kitchen granite countertops over the last 18 months.

Unfortunately last year I accidentally damaged our black granite countertop from an acid product that I had sitting on the counter. It left a large white area about 10 inches in diameter, and in a very prominent location on top of it all. After spending quite a bit of time researching optional companies on the internet, I made an appointment with N-Motion. My husband and I were extremely impressed with Kevin Hudson's professionalism, depth of knowledge, and positive and realistic focus. Kevin had a lot of special, graduated discs that he methodically utilized to remove the acid stain. As Kevin explained over the phone prior to the appointment, the process took about 2 hours. I cannot emphasize enough how relieved and thrilled we were to see our granite perfectly restored. After the work was done, we talked for a little bit about the extensive research and constant education that Kevin and his crew invest their time and money in to stay on top of continual new materials and processes on the market. The one that especially got my attention is a new process to remove stains from marble and also use an amazing process to protect the marble from stains for 15 years. (We don't have marble, but I would think that this would be something that anyone with marble would invest in. Pretty amazing.)

Then a couple weeks ago N-Motion came back to restore the edging on our kitchen granite. Our granite is at least 15 years old so probably was not prepared by the advanced fabrication that is now available. The quarter round edging had many scratchy and rough edges, and all of this rough edging has actually ruined many of my blouses and sweaters from leaning against the counter when (constantly) cooking. Very upsetting! So Kevin with N-Motion completely corrected the edging. He prepped the lower cabinets with plastic to protect them – and used a water type sander with a number of varied round discs so we wouldn't have dust in the kitchen/house from the sanding. Our countertop is now fully restored, thank goodness!

Kevin is the owner of N-Motion. He is extremely professional, courteous, honest, KNOWLEDGABLE, and focused on giving the best customer service. My husband and I completely trust him and highly recommend his company.

I don't ever give my phone number for recommendations, but I made an exception for N-Motion because we were so impressed on all counts.
